How Young Librarians Are Figuring Out the Field's Future

Article Submitted by MaryLei Barclay

The Pulse by Taunya English (Released 1/12/2016) - Today's information professionals say that Google hasn't made them obsolete. Several years ago, Forbes Magazine listed the advance degrees with the worst jobs prospects—and a master's in library sciences was No. 1 on the list. Despite that gloomy prediction and some staid image problems, young librarians say their work is relevant in the 21st century and is as needed now as it has ever been.

"You say, I'm going to library school, and everybody is like 'Well, aren't libraries kind of over? What are you going to be doing?'" said 34-year-old Jay Granger, a management and library and information sciences student in the online program at the University of Southern California.

"But we will need to embrace a whole new kind of noise in the profession," he wrote in a blog post.

"Shushing in the digital age will just get spit on your computer screen."

Granger says Google's search engine can't replace him; it just frees up information professionals to help with more complicated information needs. "That's a great way to spend a day. I love doing that," Granger said. "You're trying to set up someone on the perfect date with the perfect source."

Corporations and startups hire librarians to organize all that information they collect about customers, and Granger says... Article

Gilbert Public Library—by Nicole Miller—We're celebrating Harry Potter Book Night at the Gilbert Public Library! February 4, 2016—We will see the second annual Harry Potter Book Night celebrated throughout the world and here at the Gilbert Public Library, we're getting ready to host an unforgettable Night of Spells. The fun kicks off at 5:00pm and lasts until 6:30pm.

On Harry Potter Book Night: A Night of Spells, we'll be sharing the wonder of J.K. Rowling's unforgettable stories and, most excitingly, introducing the next generation of readers to the unparalleled magic of Harry Potter. Here at the Gilbert Public Library, wizards, witches, and muggles of all ages will be treated to an evening of games, activities, readings and quizzes. It all begins when the Sorting Hat decides who will be in which House, competing for house points with various challenges. These will include creating our own magical spells, readings from our favorite

Harry Potter books, and the Ultimate Spellathon trivia challenge! We'll be dressing up the Gilbert Community Center auditorium and creating our own Potions Corners as well as serving up snacks inspired by some of the scrumptious wizard foods in the books. Nicole Miller, Library Director, says, "We are so excited to participate in this international event to celebrate the second annual Harry Potter Book Night."

You can find out more about Harry Potter Book Night: A Night of Spells at their website and the flyer on the next page.

For more information on our event, please contact: Nicole Miller at the Gilbert Public Library, 748-2230 or email.

Friends of Library supports coffee project—Chisholm Tribune Press by Marie Tolonen (Released 1/28/2016) - Patrons of the Chisholm Public Library now have access to hot beverages.

Library Supervisor Katie Christenson told the city council recently that the Library Board has given its blessing to a request from patrons to make coffee available at the library each day of operation.

Under the library's former supervisor, coffee and cookies were offered each Wednesday, said Christianson.

A donation of a Keurig machine by the Friends of the Library has made the effort, coined the "coffee project," possible. Now located on a cart near the library's entrance is a brewing station.

Christenson said the coffee project is part of the library's effort to make the facility more community-oriented. She expressed appreciation to the Friends of the Library.

Libraries & the Changing Scholarly Environment: Case Studies for Open Science—Library Journal February 9, 3:00pm EST—As scholars use new digital tools and resources to expand their scope of research and teaching, libraries are evolving to support them. While some of these tools and resources reside within the infrastructure of the library, others sit outside of it. This is a trend that cascades across all academic disciplines, from the humanities to the sciences, with often varying needs from disparate researchers. These different needs have led libraries to develop a wide range of service models to support curricular and research needs at their institutions. Learn about these tools, resources, and services and how they can further your interactions with researchers and help you support curricular innovations. Register

Rethinking Library Instruction—ALA February 8, 4 week course fee $175.00—Too often a library's rich resources are underutilized because library users don't know how to use them, are afraid to ask, or simply aren't aware. Whether in public or academic libraries, effective instructional programs developed around a library's resources and services can boost customer satisfaction. Through this interactive eCourse, training specialist Paul Signorelli will help you and your staff increase awareness of all the library has to offer as he teaches basic instructional techniques to improve presentation skills. The eCourse will also include readings, simple assignments, an asynchronous discussion board, and optional, live, online discussions. Register

Basic American Sign Language for Library Staff eCourse—ALA fee $195.00—March 7, continuing for 6 weeks—American Sign Language (ASL) is an invaluable skill for library professionals. A basic grasp of ASL enhances your ability to serve deaf library users and opens up a new world of possibilities for baby storytime programs. It's also a marketable professional skill that can translate to public service jobs beyond the library world. Register

20 Subjects in 90 minutes: Themed Programs for Adults Workshop—ALA February 10, 2:30pm Eastern—Themed events are popular throughout the year at libraries and community colleges and often entice a lot of visitors. In addition to summer reading programs, One Book community tie-ins, special themed weeks, and anniversary celebrations, are you ever wondering what else you could provide for adults to get them interested and engaged? In this workshop, library services and vintage cooking enthusiast Amy Alession, will introduce you to 20 themes that you can use, including three or more program ideas per theme. While outside performers and groups are often necessary to hire to meet these themes, many topics can be addressed by staff run events. Register

Managing with Data: Using ACRLMetrics and PLAMetrics—Cisco WebEx—February 12, 12:00pm CST—We will show you how data can help you manage your library more effectively and improve accountability! The key to the important data provided by the Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL) and the Public Library Association (PLA) is knowing how to extract and apply the most relevant information. New Spring Nonfiction for the Library, Classroom and Home—School Library Journal February 10, 3:00pm EST—With the elevated emphasis of higher learning standards, providing patrons with informative, high-quality (and highly appealing) nonfiction is more vital than ever. Outstanding nonfiction is key to meeting the needs of all readers, from the very youngest library users to high school students. Register

Why Books are Still A Good Library Brand—Library Journal—February 11, 3:00pm EST—Today's libraries do so much more than just loan books. With innovative programming, educational and outreach initiatives, and amazing electronic resources, why would libraries want to be thought of as "the book place"? Join us to explore the notion of embracing the book brand to advance the library's role. Register
